Chapter 17 – The Hunting of the White Stag
After having a few drops of Lucy’s magic cordial from Father Christmas, Edmund felt much better. Aslan crowns the children as the Kings and Queens of Narnia, and then Aslan disappears. Mr Beaver explains Aslan leaves Narnia when he is no longer needed.

Reading
Why you think Aslan is no longer needed in Narnia? Explain as fully as you can then draw the scene in the Great Hall of Cair Paravel as the children become Kings and Queens of Narnia.

Writing
As Kings and Queens, the children introduce fair laws and rules to keep Narnia peaceful and to make sure all the creatures can live in harmony. Create a poster with 5 different rules or laws you think the children should introduce to Narnia.
For example,
1. No magic should be used to harm another creature.

Maths
Complete the questions to the side, think carefully about each question and remember to show your working out to explain how you came to your answer!
Then practise your column addition and subtraction using the Drag and Drop Calculations activity for age range 7-9 on Google ‘Oxford Owl home maths games.’

Place Value
How many if I have one hundred more?
498

Problem Solving
How many sides are there in total?

Reasoning
If I count in multiples of eight, I will say the number 32.
Is Alison correct?
Explain why.

Geography: Rivers
Using your ‘Rivers and Seas’ map activity from last week, produce fact cards for some of the rivers in the UK.
Where does it start? Where does it end? How long is it? What towns does it pass through?

After you have looked at some of larger rivers in the UK, research the main river that flows through our hometown of Doncaster. Use the internet to create a fact file for the river; including what it has been used for, where it passes through and how deep the river is. You might have even walked past this river with your family or seen it from our town centre!
